CHAPTER XIII.—Concluded.

Winterbotham knew, but Winterbotham was taking Violet to safety. The colossal crime of the madman would be consummated before there was the slightest possibility of relief.

The realisation occupied but a moment of time. The four silver stars on the black gown had hardly time to flash when the whole incredible horror of what was going to happen, had burst itself into his brain.

"One, Two, Three! Four! Then came a soft grating, a drawing, and turning his head, he saw the little dwarf slithering up to Lord Landrylair. She was a block of solid stone, standing in the hand, waving it about, and looking up to his great height like a dog which had retrieved something unusual and wanted to understand.

"Gone! With a low popping from her as she crouched in front of him.

Then there was another sound, a lurching and crunching of heavy boots, and a distant shout.

The big, debranched sergeant of Sir Gregory's face pure and swarthy, his eyes almost closed, had come into the帮助less man's range of vision.

"Tamm' you!" he buried at the Earl, who was standing at a safe distance.

"What you say to me and my mate, SirGregory? You! You've poisoned him, and tried to do me in, too, you and your—s—"

Gerald saw Lord Landrylair turn and dash off again, a lurching and crunching of heavy boots.

Then there was another sound, a lurching and crunching of heavy boots, and a distant shout.

He staggered and almost fell just as Lord Landrylair crooked himself to spring, as he had done.

With an oath, the ex-sergeant tried to free himself of the writhing, screaming, little one, who was still clinging to his hand, waving it about, and looking up to his great height like a dog which had retrieved something unusual and wanted to understand.

THE UKRAINE AGREES TO PEACE TREATY TO BE SIGNED

LONDON, Jan. 21. German messages from Brest-Litovsk state that the Germans and Ukrainians have agreed on a truce for peace, and the conference will resume shortly to sign a treaty.

An Amsterdam message says it is officially announced from Brest-Litovsk that a state of war with the Ukraine no longer exists.

Troops stationed on the frontier will be withdrawn immediately the peace treaty is signed. It is expected that the treaty must provide for the direct recognition of regular economic intercourse and the re-establishment of diplomatic and consular relations at the earliest opportunity.

German reports from Brest-Litovsk say that the next step is for the delegates to confer with the responsible authorities at home. All delegations agreed that the adjournment must be as short as possible.

An inspired statement from Berlin adds: "We thus succeeded for the first time in the world war in finding grounds for a stable peace."

The Berlin "Local Anzeiger" states that when Trotsky returns to Brest-Litovsk on January 20 he must state definitely whether he accepts the Central Powers' demands. If he continues to try and spread revolutionary doctrines in the occupied districts the Central Powers will break off negotiations.

BRITISH ARMY.

GOVERNMENT METHODS CRITICISED.

TRUTH DEMANDED.

The replies of Mr. Bonar Law in the House of Commons over the Cambrai affair have aroused much public criticism, especially the statement that the High Command had not been surprised, and had made adequate provision to meet an attack.

On the other hand, that notwithstanding this, enormous changes had been made at the British Headquarters in France, where it is reported General Herbert Lawrence becomes the high chief of staff.

The "Star" publishes an interview with Colonel Repington, the well-known military critic, who said he resigned the "Times" military correspondence because hitherto he had regarded the "Times" as a great paper, but with its editor open to criticism the Government, public servants, and constituents of the country's welfare demanded.

If the present state of things is allowed to continue, "he said, "only disaster can befall the country. The Government has lost the confidence, not only of labour, but of the great majority of the public. If existing policies are continued, the military and naval services will be wrecked. It is of interest against generals and admirals, the Government would inform the nation of the seriousness of affairs, it might retrieve its position. The army is tired and disgusted of the intrigues which have sickened every decent-minded person this year."

"The army has seen good men after much hard work to cover up political blunders and intrigues. Every time the General Assembly has been made to shift the responsibility from a politician to a soldier. This campaign of slander and vilification is nauseating. Dr. Douglas Haig's despatch showed that the army's hard work was due to the difficulty of securing drafts sufficiently long before the despatch was issued. General Haig also made a report upon Cambrai. The officers responsible were quite prepared to take any blame justly attributed to them, but the War Cabinet again resorted to secrecy. Why not tell the public the truth?"

A contributor to the "Daily Mail" asserts that the War Office at Whitehall is the chief factor in the public's distrust of the Government. It will be difficult to restore the confidence of the public in the War Office, and the only way to do this is to abandon the War Cabinet and to re-establish the old War Office.

The "Westminster Gazette" regards the criticism of the "Daily Mail" as a great blow to the unionists. It is imbued with the spirit of protectionism. The brains of the new army are not fully availed of. Their place on the staff are very close-preserved. Promotion is confined within narrow limits.

The "Daily Mail" says: "Fair-trading reforms become inevitable in a system which leaves staff appointments as the prerogative of the regulars. The old vicious system has given way to the man power in the new army. All posts in the army and navy must be thrown open to ability from whatever class it may spring."

The "Evening Standard" says: "Rightly or wrongly a public impression has been created that failure in the higher ranks are not punished, and severity is meted out to subordinates in use made of the talents in the new army. There is a certain lack of imagination in the high command. If the full truth were told to the public in Cambrai it would be found that the misconduct was due to a serious first-line failure."

THE CAMBRAI REPORT. In the House of Commons, Mr. Bonar Law to-day said that all the documents relating to Cambrai had been submitted to the War Cabinet. General Smuts had made a report, which was not subject to revision by both Houses. (Cheers.)

CONTROL OF TRANSPORT. The "Daily Mail" says: "Fair-trading reforms become inevitable in a system which leaves staff appointments as the prerogative of the regulars. Critical Period Ahead. The "Daily Mail" says: "Fair-trading reforms become inevitable in a system which leaves staff appointments as the prerogative of the regulars. The old vicious system has given way to the man power in the new army. All posts in the army and navy must be thrown open to ability from whatever class it may spring."

ITALIAN ARTILLERY. Mr. Warner Allott telegraphs that the Italian artillery is stronger than ever. The bases in guns have been made good. Factories in some cases have more than doubled their output.

TRAINING SHIP BURNED. The training ship Waspiret was burned to the water's edge following a bunker fire at the front. He narrated an incident in which 500 Germans were wiped out in the Passchendaele region. The Germans were retreating and the British advancing. The Germans received a broadside which they were unable to return. The Allott machine-guns were turned loose before there was time to "Kamikaze." Every German was killed. It was impossible to trust the Huns in such a case as this which reached me, they are extremely unfounded."

SHIPPING AMALGAMATIONS. The proprietors of the Mercantile Steamship Company are considering Lord Innes's offer to purchase its share capital on behalf of the Peninsular and Oriental Company and the British-India Steam Navigation Company, the latter under the name of the British-India Steam Navigation Company.

THE NEW TYRANNY.

BOLSHEVIKISM. A WARNING SYMBOL.

LONDON, Jan. 21. The Petrograd correspondent of the "Daily Chronicle" telegraphs that M. Shchegolev, ex-Minister in the Provisional Government, and M. Kokoshev, member of the Cadet party, have resigned on Sunday. They came to Petrograd to attend the Constituent Assembly, and were arrested and confined in a fortress. Their imprisonment resulted in illness, and they were removed at the request of their friends to the Marie Hospital. They left prison at 8 o'clock in the evening, and were murdered on the same night.

An Amsterdam message says it is officially announced from Brest-Litovsk that a state of war with the Ukraine no longer exists.

Troops stationed on the frontier will be withdrawn immediately the peace treaty is signed. It is expected that the treaty must provide for the direct recognition of regular economic intercourse and the re-establishment of diplomatic and consular relations at the earliest opportunity.

CRISIS IN AUSTRIA.

CABINET RESIGNS.

PEOPLE DESIRE PEACE.

LONDON, Jan. 21. The latest Amsterdam advises that the Austrian Cabinet, of which Herr von Seidler is Premier, has resigned. Count von Toggenburg is forming a Cabinet. Dr. Wekerle, the Hungarian Premier, also has gone to Vienna to offer his Cabinet's resignation.

No Vienna papers are appearing.

Berlin papers, except "Vorwärts," preserve complete silence. "Vorwärts" preserves the situation as one of extreme gravity, and expresses the opinion that Austria is turning against the veiled annexation of the German polity.

A Washington report says official documents state that the Austrian Socialists demand: (1) the resumption of the negotiations at Brest-Litovsk will not be broken off because of territorial exigencies; (2) complete reform of the provisional system; (3) universal equal direct suffrage at communal elections.

The Home correspondent of the United Press states that a report from the Papal Nuncio in Vienna says that all Austria-Hungary is a fire with open opposition to Germany. President Wilson's message is understood, has created widespread demands for a democratic peace. The spreading industrial chaos is also a strong factor.

Friends of other Imperialist Ministers are in continual fear that they will be forced to resign. The Red Guards demanding that the Ministers be handed over for summary treatment. Konovaloff and Tretjakoff have been transferred to hospital. Terekhov, Karashchuk, Bernatzky, Kishkin, and Stepanov are still in the fortress of Peter the Great. The Committee has called a comic at the end of the morning. A sailor insisted that the tribune and demanded that members should disperse as the guard was tired. M. Tschernoff replied: "Our deputies are tired, too, but must do their duty to the people by carrying the great principles of land nationalisation." The sailor insisted, and the German Emperor is desperately striving to avert a crisis.

INDUSTRIAL UPHEAVAL. The Milan correspondent of the "Daily Telegraph" says that the general strikes in Austria have originated in a reduction in the bread ration. The "Arbeiter Zeitung" denounced the reduction, and declared that the privileged classes were tolerably provided for, whereas million could not get bread, and the authorities did not care.

The paper urged the workers to demand a departmental strike. The response was immediate. Many railway and State workers struck, and the popular joined in.

The Bolshevik Commissary to the Assembly announced that the Assembly would not meet again. Skvorhoff, the Bolshevik leader, stated that Parliamentary institutions were only a fiction of the bourgeoisie.

Red Guards and sailors continue to patrol Petrograd. There has been no shooting, but a general strike is in progress.

"I cannot tell all the brutalities and excesses which are ravaging Russia from end to end," adds the correspondent. "Plunder and the cruellest forms of murder are as common as their horrors pall. The tyranny is worse than Nicholas II. The Bolsheviks are a want of sympathy, the latter's violent forms of social upheaval have been stopped. Their object is to enable the proletariat to capture the accumulated wealth of civilisation."

A message from Petrograd says the Government has ordered an inquiry to be held regarding Friday's shooting incidents. The Bolsheviks blame the pre-constituent Assembly demonstrators, alleging that they provoked the shooting.

A number of Red Guards, writing to the newspapers, announce their resignations as a protest against the suppression of the Constituent Assembly.

CIVIL WAR EXPECTED.

Leopold Arndt, the German Minister of the Constitutional Assembly, declared that the Socialists represented the highest democratic power in the world. The Russian people must act resolutely now, or they would be doomed. He was not afraid of civil war, because it was impossible for Russia to become a Socialist State without passing through civil war.

The Petrograd correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph says the Smolny Institute has issued orders disallowing any fixed meeting in the Taurida Palace. The Constitutional Assembly may be considered dead. The Bolsheviks have confiscated papers containing reports of the Constituent Assembly, and have reprinted them as the country's welfare demanded.

If the present state of things is allowed to continue, "he said, "only disaster can befall the country. The Government has lost the confidence, not only of labour, but of the great majority of the public. If existing policies are continued, the military and naval services will be wrecked. It is of interest against generals and admirals, the Government would inform the nation of the seriousness of affairs, it might retrieve its position. PROTEST FROM RUSSIA. The Council of Commissaries has sent a protest to Japan against the landing of troops at Vladivostock.

BACK FROM GERMANY. The Council of Commissaries has sent a protest to Japan against the landing of troops at Vladivostock.

AUSTRALIANS' EXPERIENCES.

Thirty-eight Australians were among the 500,000 men who had been repatriated from Germany, including Private E. H. Maxwell, who told a terrible story of the condition of the new army and of the terrible suffering of the regulars. The old vicious system was only for scoundrels. It hangs on their uniforms, infested and emaciated bodies. The men were hardly able to crawl. Even a German doctor exclaimed: "They are mere like famished wolves than English soldiers." He sent the news to be held for a week's rest.

After a two days' engagement north of Maun the Arabs occupied Jaffed-Dervish and killed 80 Turks. They also captured 200 prisoners and one field gun.

British aeroplanes bombed Maun three times.

VLADIVOSTOCK.

PALESTINE.

THE BRITISH OPERATIONS.

An official report from Palestine states: Successful patrol actions in the coastal areas brought in prisoners.

Our aeroplanes raided camps and stores near a railway station two miles westward of Samaria. We drove down one enemy machine. One of ours was compelled to land in the enemy lines, but was destroyed before capture.

ARABS HASSAR TURKS.

The Press Bureau announces that Arab forces have carried out successful operations since January 1, in the neighbourhood of Maun. They occupied Iahor with the result that two of our patrols were sunk.

The enemy went southward of Iahor, where the Breslau was forced into a mine field. She struck a mine and sank. The Gothen went in full-speed towards the Dardanelles. Turkish destroyers coming to the assistance of the Breslau were driven off.

WHERE IS THE FLEET?

Sometimes we hear the question, "Where is the Fleet?" Usually it is the German fleet that is referred to, but the question is asked at times regarding the British fleet.

After a day's engagement north of Maun the Arabs occupied Jaffed-Dervish and killed 80 Turks. They also captured 200 prisoners and one field gun.

British aeroplanes bombed Maun three times.

EAST AFRICA.

An official message from East Africa states: We are getting in contact with the enemy 50 miles south-west of Port Auvela.

Our aeroplanes raided camps and stores near a railway station two miles westward of Samaria. We drove down one enemy machine. One of ours was compelled to land in the enemy lines, but was destroyed before capture.

UNITED STATES.

PROPOSED WAR COUNCIL.

President Wilson has issued a statement in which he says the War Department is performing a task of unparalleled magnitude with extraordinary promptness and efficiency.

President Roosevelt's speech on the subject of the proposed war council was particularly critical, declaring that agricultural and industrial interests were quite prepared to take any blame justly attributed to them, but the War Cabinet again resorted to secrecy.

Mr. Hughes' speech on the subject of the proposed war council was equally critical.

MAN POWER BILL.

A LIVELY DEBATE.

The Man Power Bill passed through the committee stage in the House of Commons after a lively debate. Many members objected to the immense powers vested in a single Minister. Representatives of agriculture were particularly critical, declaring that agricultural and industrial interests were quite prepared to take any blame justly attributed to them, but the War Cabinet again resorted to secrecy.

Mr. Hughes' speech on the subject of the proposed war council was equally critical.

THE CAMBRAI REPORT.

In the House of Commons, Mr. Bonar Law to-day said that all the documents relating to Cambrai had been submitted to the War Cabinet. General Smuts had made a report, which was not subject to revision by both Houses. (Cheers.)

CONTROL OF TRANSPORT.

The "Daily Express" reports that Sir Philip Nash has been appointed Director-General of transportation for all the Allies.

This is another step in the direction of unified control.

DEALING WITH PROFITEERS.

Mr. G. J. Clynes (Parliamentary Secretary to the Food Control Department), in a speech at Manchester, said the magistrates were to be asked to introduce a special rate of offenders, in addition to fines and imprisonment, which would have to repay double the amount of the excess charged over fixed prices.

ITALIAN ARTILLERY.

Mr. Warner Allott telegraphs that the Italian artillery is stronger than ever. The bases in guns have been made good. Factories in some cases have more than doubled their output.

TRAINING SHIP BURNED.

The training ship Waspiret was burned to the water's edge following a bunker fire at the front.

He narrated an incident in which 500 Germans were wiped out in the Passchendaele region. The Germans were retreating and the British advancing.

The Germans received a broadside which they were unable to return. The Allott machine-guns were turned loose before there was time to "Kamikaze."

Every German was killed. It was impossible to trust the Huns in such a case as this which reached me, they are extremely unfounded.

GERMAN PLANS.

FOR THE NEXT WAR.

The London "Times," under the heading, "Militarists Unshaken," quotes freely from a notable book, "Deductions from the World War," by Lieutenant-General Baron von Freytag-Lorringhoven, who was Quartermaster-General in the field when Falkenhayn was called in as German General Staff, and is now stationed in Paris as Deputy-Chief of the General Staff.

The following are comments by "The Times," together with passages from the book:—Freytag says there can be no reduction of the two years—for some arms three years' service. He attacks particularly the various schemes for the early boys, and for those who prefer to military account, but says that there this cannot provide any substitute for "real soldiering in soldiering." He proceeds:—

"It may be that in the use of all that is left, the world's exhaustion of Europe after the world-confederation of a certain part of the world, the need to make this terrible murder of peoples point inevitably to the necessity of disarmament to peace in the way of permanent peace?" The reply is that "there is no way to make a man guarantee a long period of peace, and that a lasting peace is guaranteed only by strong armament, and that the world is not conceivable without striving for expression of power in the world, and consequently for war." But that involves the constant existence of the possibility of friction. Hence arises the necessity for adequate armaments on land and sea. The world was not afraid of world-war, but that Germany must seek to come to terms with her claim to sea-power. We need not at present discuss by what means this aim is to be attained.

Freytag goes on to declare emphatically that the reason why Germany enjoyed peace for so long before the present war was not the strength of the German armament, or the moderation of the people, and the many "fine speeches," but solely "the power of the Germans, who are not to be overruled." That Germany must seek to come to terms with her claim to sea-power. We need not at present discuss by what means this aim is to be attained.

The consequences of the blockade to which the Central Powers were subjected showed that the war was not the one we expected. In developing the war, we ourselves gained strength, yet the unfavourable state of the world-economic situation has throughout the war been the cause of our difficulties. We gains why our enemies found even fresh possibilities of resistance, because the sea stood open to them, and why victory, which would have been a short and decisive, and the conquest of whole kingdoms did not bring us nearer to peace. It is the sword which has won the war, and it is the sword which will hold that gives the decision, but the effect is far more dependent than the effect is to be upon world-economic factors. These factors run the world, and we are of them."

There are some interesting references to the spirit of the various armies. The Austrians are described as "a people of the sword," and then with a patronage, going on contempt. Freytag says this out-right that the Germans were in several occasions threatened with the withdrawal of the Austrian Army before being defeated utterly by the far superior Russians. As regards the Germans, he says that "we were often more successful in our attacks than our opponents, but the effect was not so great as we expected." The Germans were defeated by the far superior Russians.

As regards the Germans, he says that "we were often more successful in our attacks than our opponents, but the effect was not so great as we expected."
